Summer Glories and Perennial Beauties of Central Park Which

BRUSH OR PEN CANNOT PORTRAY.

THE GREAT ANNUAL COACHING PARADE

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.] NEW YORK, May 11 .- After all that has been written and said about Central Park, its summer glories and perennial beauty, its natural attractions, its artificial adoraments, and of the great throng which daily line its lovely walks and circulate in gilded equipages its drives, the ordinary mind cannot comprehend or appreciate Central Park as a whole. As often as I have been in the park, summer and winter, I daily see new beauties and new attractions in every detail. Central Park is one of the greatest sights to be seen in New York. It does not appeal alone to the artistic sense, nor to the man or woman of one proove, like very many other attractions of this world, but it same age, and three other Italian laborers, presents something which every human drank and played cards together until midbeing can enjoy who has the sense of sight, nd, of color, and is a lover of nature

At this season of the year Central Park blooms out in all its natural magnificence; with the trees in full leaf, the walks and drives free as vet from summer dust, the green velvet sward spreading away to the right and left over hill and dale, its serpentine drives thronged with carriages and vehicles of every description, its lanes and seats filled with prattling children and their nurses. Ah! it is a lovely sight, and one which to enjoy thoroughly must be seen again and again, like some famous landscape hung upon a gallery wall.

BEYOND ARTIST OR AUTHOR. No painter could ever do justice to such a quately describe the appealing comeliness of such a scene. In my travels throughout the world I have been in many famous parks. Among them all Central Park, now almost in the heart of this great metropolis, is the most delightful. This, I take it, is from the fact of great natural advantages presented by a rugged surface, its rolling swards and alternating forests and lakes. The landscape artists agree that the most of these leatures and leaves no monotony to weary the senses.

You can enter Central Park at almost any beyond pistol shot. Of what is to come next you know not until a little further advanced appears the unexpected. It may be a tangled copse, it may be a pellucid pool lying under the darkening shades, it may be some small mound of jagged rock, or ngain some artistic creation in marble or bronze, or yet again some low cavern into which the visitor gropes his wandering way down through the narrow gorge neatly paved and stepped with stone-or perhaps over a rising knoll he comes suddenly upon a lovely sweep of common whereon flocks of sheep graze—a truly pastoral scene. CALM CROQUET.

On that common on certain days you will see perhaps 100 young ladies and young men, in the bloom of youthfulness and beauty, indulging in the not overexciting pastime of croquet. On other commons on certain days you will see myriads of young men and boys in shirt sleeves tossing the lively ball. Marking these days is the flag at the mast-head, which informs everybody of the privileges thus to be enjoyed. The guardians of the park reserve those commons on all other days sacred from intrudstretch of walk lined with benches, thou-New Yorkers take their evening promenade. On every levely day throughout the summer, and especially of mornings and evenings of the hot and dusty season, not a single seat will be found vacant. Under the bridges which span the guiches here and there, and amid the delightful shades of "The Ramble," lovers sit and coo the hours away, happy in themselves, un-mindful of the world and blind both to nature and to art. In the crooked paths which wind among the hillocks and crags and forests of the wilder portion of the upper park you come upon them unexpectedly and with half apology upon the lips for the accidental interruption of your presence. But you know very well that the fair bands so hastily dropped will be as promptly resumed, and that the arm which innocently rests upon the back of the seat will presently fall again and clasp the slender waist from which it has been startled.

GAUDY VEHICLES. In the early mornings of spring, before the sun's rays have fallen uncomfortably upon the highway, the serpentine drives are crowded with the greatest variety of con-veyances that American ingenuity and American money and taste have been able to invent. Just now the yellow carts, buckboards and light wagons of all kinds are especially prominent. These are driven mostly by the young bloods of fashion or of the turt, and the horsefiesh displayed therein is in many respects superior to that which can be seen in front of any other vehicles. The owners of these light and showy wagons, for the most part, are owners of other turnouts, perhaps half a dozen or more, but they prefer the yellow wagon is a fad of the season. They greatly affect gaudy harness and other trappings. The collar of the young man's horse is of spotless white, and the rest of the harness of black and silwer or gold. The latest for the yellow wagon, however, is of russet leather. The buckboards are decorated with silver ornaments, and very often showy tassels or cocades are sewn upon the harness.

Once in a while you will see the high

English dog-cart of yellow wood, or perhans a mail-wagon of the same material. These are driven tandem, though quite frequently the heavy English cart horse, very high and long of limb and reach, will make an equally striking picture. Sometimes the young blood with a buckboard drives tandem with that machine, but this style is not considered in good taste.

THE TANDEM PARADE. parade of tandem outlits. Saturday the New York Tandem Club holds its spring drive. There will be of this organization alone some 10 to 15 tandem teams, and they will make a gaudy show. It will meet at the Casino in the morning, thence, driving through the park, going to Jerome Park, where a lunch will be served. On every such occasion everybody who owns anything that can be driven tandem will turn McLesn. out and add to the pageantry of the scene.

Almost every day now one of the most comical sights in the park is the assemblage of a lot of fat women who ride for the pur-pose of reducing flesh. It is not an uncommon thing to see a riding-master or escort, with a half dozen fat ladies gently ambling along in his rear, engaged in that world-wide occupation, the search for health. I think it is one of the most comical sights I ever saw, and the comicality of it is not lost upon those who are the unwilling victims of obesity. Let the occasional stroller or bencher dure to laugh, however, and he will be surely greeted with the indgnant frowns of the more or less ungraceful horsewoman. A lady on horseback, like a lady in a bathing suit, shows to great advantage when she has a good figure and to the poorest ad-vantage when she has not. Put a dumpy, woman on horseback and she is ridiculous spectacle, and the same is true, for that matter, with regard to fat men. On the other hand, the slender, willowy-or, to use a more modern term, swelte-horse-women is the rule in Central Park, and there are plenty of young men to match-

last two years has grown to such an extent that the Park Commissioners have petitioned that the Park Commissioners have petitioned the Legislature for the passage of a law to widen all of the equestrian roads. This will cost about $500,000. At present but two riders can ride abreast, which makes it dangerous to life and limb, and is certainly subversive of pleasure when it comes to meeting other riders at full tilt. A number of accidents have occurred when riders have attempted to pass each other on the same track going in different directions. The latter part of last month the various riding clubs of the city had a grand turnout in the park to the extent of a couple hundred horsemen. Over 100 of these were in the uniforms of their respective clubs. It was a brilliant spectacle.

One of the other memorable annual occasions in Central Park is the parade of the Coaching Club. This always brings out an immense crowd of people of all grades of society and all ages. It is a better show than Barnum's circus, this great display of wealth and fashion. The big yellow coaches with 10 to 12 well dressed ladies and gentlemen on top can be seen on other days occa-sionally, but the great annual parade is worth coming many miles to see. CHARLES T. MURRAY.

Bloodthirsty Combat Between Two Italians

in the Streets of New York. NEW YORK, May 11 .- Pasquale Marres cola, aged 32 years, Francisco Michaeli, the night last night in an Italian resort in James street. Marrescola and Michaeli then started for home with one of their companions. The two men named got into a quarrel, and the third man left them.

A few minutes later Michaeli, with blood streaming from a terrible gash across his face, ran up to a policeman at Roosevelt and South streets and fell at his feet from weakness. Another policeman a short dis-tance away found Marecoli lying on the sidewalk senseless and bleeding from several wounds in the abdomen. Both were taken to Chambers Street Hospital, where it was found that Marecoli was suffering from five stiletto wounds in the chest and abdomen. The surgeons say Marecoli will die. Citizens of Washington State Boastful of the Greatness of

Thrift and Enterprise. VAST RESOURCES OF THE SUNSET LAND

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPASOR . SEATTLE, May 6.-There is but one Seattle. Would you see a town in which development keeps page with resources, ambitious projects with material prosperity-a town which has made greater strides during the past year than any other north of California and west of the Rocky Mountains? If so, you must come to Washington, for here is the magic city of seven letters and three syllables found-Seattle-a town of varied and exhaustless resources, a place in which one can find plenty of chances to make money, and, better still, to spend it. Even if the Seattle man dies young in years, he has lived long. He lives more in

He knows how to live, too. All that is worth seeing he sees. He is an enterprising article and as "elear as a hound's tooth." The sign, "power to let," seems written upon his comprehensive brow. Washington is immensely proud of her twin cities, as they are called, Tacoma and Seattle. It is difficult to say to which she vields precedence. Seattle does not depend upon any one resource for her future growth and success. Consequently the young man who here enters the arena of action cannot complain of her lack of adaptability to his chosen trade, business or professi NAMED APTER A WOMAN.

The city takes its name from Angeline Seattle, an early pioneer of feminine prog-ress, and a woman whose ways were kindly and gracious as "the alms deeds which she did" bear witness. Many cities in the Mis-sissippi Valley have grown into commer-cial fame by having centered in them an immense grain trade. The growth of the cities of Pennsylvania is chiefly due to her vast iron interests. The mines have given the towns of Colorado their precedence. In California all cities of metropolitan importance have sprung up in a few years in re-gions where the fruit industry is the chief resource and financial reliance.

But Seattle has all of these resources com bined. She manufactures iron, handles grain, converts timber into merchantable lumber, raises fruit for market, develops the mining of precious metals, exports and imports the products of other countries, and her natural location is such that these are not her only resources. A city like Seattle that can sustain 50,000 people and grow 5,000 a year must have facilities for employment at once varied and almost limitless It has been said that the future of the new State of Washington lies in China, Japan and Corea. Here youth and age meet face of the entire world looks over the Pacific at the oldest. Here the picturesque Asiatic hobnobs with the unpicturesque, but wideawake American. Into the heart of the sunset land the people of Washington look for their future riches. The Asiatic coast imports annually over $300,000,000 of goods. The greater part of this trade gets into England; but Seattle people claim that most of this wealth will eventually come to American shores. Natural laws will drift the traffic to the Pacific coast, as distance saved is in favor of the Americans. It is this outlook which makes Seattle sanguine of great future success.

Since the fire of June 6 Seattle has seemed to be endowed with new life and vigor. I am told that $10,000,000 at the lowest represent the cost of buildings now constructed.

Like Chicago, fire has no power seemingly to kill Seattle—it but kindles, but inspires.

Three miles of costly buildings have recently been erected. Seattle is the center of a great wheat field which produces annually over 20,000,000 bushels of wheat. The city is truly the commercial center of Washington. A $2,500,000 iron and steel plant has lately been added to the city's important manufacturing interests. Her resources in coal, soapstone, lime and building stone, marble, slate as well as gold, silver and copper are unsurpassed in the West. There can be no limit to growth when there is no limit to resource.

WASHINGTON'S RIG FORESTS.

It will not be long before Western Washington will become known as the country of crops. It has been said that there is sufficient timber growing to support the people of Washington for at least a century. Such enormous trees one has never before seen in this section of the world. It is no uncom-mon thing for lumbermen to ship beams 200 feet in length. They generally have to be shortened, however, owing to difficulty in transportation. There are several vessels in Puget Sound, as long as 130 feet built of timbers which run from stem to stern, not one of them spliced. Spars and masts are manufactured fin Seattle and sent to foreign countries-to North Africa, Spain and South

Last summer during the forest fires enough timber was burnt off Western Washington, in the vicinity of Seattle, to pay off more than the national debt. Yet, in this vast lumber district, its loss was not even felt. There are nearly 30,000,000 acres of timber land in Western Washington, and the sawing and shipping of lumber naturally finds its center in this busy and unconquerable city. Idle hands here mist necessarily be the fault of idle brains. Enthusiasm helps enthusiasm.

Cities, like people, prove an inspiration to each other. One bit of individual influence goes further than we think; ever circling and widening, Seattle feels the fire of Tacoma. Tacoma catches the glow of Seattle. The latter being a larger town has doubtless a more distinctive—perhaps enterprising—character. The twin cities, how-ever, are rivals in the best sense of the word -each seeking to prove its Americanism by its push, thoroughness and dauntless courage. How well each succeeds, the events of the present tell. H. M. SPALDING.

Nearly everybody needs a good medicine. The impurities which have accumulated in the blood during the cold months must be expelled, or when the mild days come, and the effect of bracing air is lost, the body is liable to be overcome by debility or some serious dis-ease. The remarkable success achieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the many words of praise it has received, make it worthy your confidence. It is the "ideal Spring Medicine." "Last spring I was completely fagged out, My strength left me and I felt sick and miser-able all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. APPLIED ZOOLOGY

As the MAMMOTH, in pre-historic times, exceeded in bulk all other forms of contemporary life, so in present times LAIRD'S MAMMOTH SHOE STORES surpass all competitors in number, quantity and quality of goods, but especially in the marvelous bargains presented at all times.

swarming in American waters, so do Shoes, at LAIRD'S, made from Alligator hides, defy wear and water as perfectly as when it was originally fastened upon the back of his Gaitership.

The distinguished member of the genus capricornus com-monly known as DONGOLA GOAT, furnishes fine, soft skins for lady tourists; Shoes especially adapted for scaling mountains and high peaks.

In this business, as in others, the most useful are the common.

The difference between seeing curious and interesting objects at Museums and these wonders of APPLIED ZOOLOGY AT LAIRD'S is, that it costs you money at the former, while you can save much money by visiting the latter.
